Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Monday 24 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Heavy rain in north, drier for a time in southwest.

Today:
Cloudy across eastern and northern Scotland with outbreaks of rain, the heaviest, most persistent rain becoming confined to the eastern Northwest Highlands and the Great Glen this morning. Brighter, drier across the southwest but some rain returning this afternoon.

Tonight:
Rather cloudy with outbreaks of rain, still occasionally heavy especially across the north and east. The rain turns more showery overnight with some clear spells developing, especially in the southwest.

Tuesday:
Bright for many with occasionally heavy showers, the shower may merge to give some longer spells of heavy rain across eastern parts. Northern Isles largely dry with sunny spells.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Sunny spells Wednesday with showers, locally heavy and slow moving in east. Dry with sunny spells Thursday. Bright start in east Friday, otherwise rather cloudy patchy rain edging east.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.